PRESIDENT AT PLAY

VACATION DIVERSIONS OF THE NA-TION'S CHIEF MAGISTRATE.

He and His Opponent, Judge Parker, Both Devoted to Outdoor Life-The President Camps Out With His Boys and Enjoys Roughing It.

Theodore Roosevelt is a man who thoroughly enjoys life. He does not believe, with Russell Sage, in not taking vacations. He is known as the most strenuous of presidents, yet he enjoys immensely his summer rest. The energy which he puts into the discharge of his executive functions he obtains through his vigorous exercise and through being so much out of doors. Every day, year in and year out, no matter what the condition of official business or the state of the WANTED-Pantry girls at the Harper weather, he manages to obtain some summer months the president plans to WANTED—Cook and two girls a Wright's restaurant, 1923 Second ave summer months the president plans to devote the greater portion of his time to life out of doors and to recreations which both recruit his physical energies and distract his mind from the heavy cares of his high office.

It is an interesting circumstance that the candidates of both the great parties WANTED-Ladies. Our catalogue exfor president this year are men who are devoted to outdoor exercise and who have been able to accomplish what they have largely because of the physical energy they have gained from constant communion with nature and use of their muscles under the open sky and in the light of the health giving sun. Judge Alton B. Parker takes his morning bath in the Hudson and his horseback ride during the summer season, and he forgets the cares of professional and public life amid the pastoral WANTED-A good girl or middle-aged scenes of his farm at Esopus. Theodore Roosevelt, with his family of boys and girls about him at his summer home at Oyster Bay on Long Island, is also a thorough champion of life in the open. Active, agile, bubbling over with spirits like a boy out of school, always ready for a game or a horseback ride or a tramp over the hills and along the In nearly every case where women and picturesque Long Island shore, the president of the United States shows is to be had from a healthy, active, unrestrained enjoyment of a summer's va cation.

Mrs. Roosevelt agrees with the president in these ideas. She loves to be her husband's companion and to enjoy everything that he does, horseback riding, driving, reading and study. She does not find herself troubled with ennui when the warm days of midsummer are here. She is devoting much time this summer to study of German and to botany. The president is a splendid linguist and is especially popular with the diplomatic corps because he can'converse with most of its members in their native tongue. Mrs. Roosevelt hopes by next winter to be as much at ease in German as the president. She is a fine French scholar. H. J. TOHER & CO.—Brokers, Daven-Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are both fond of botany, and their out of door life makes it natural for them to devote time to observation of flowers and plants. When in Washington they are accustomed to have dally strolls about the White House grounds, in the course of which they examine the shrubs and plants. Sagamore Hill, the Roosevelt home at Oyster Bay, is conveniently located for HENRY GAETHJE-Proprietor Chipthe enjoyment of short outings. Mr. Roosevelt has been accustomed to go camping with the boys-Theodore junior, Kermit, Archie and Quentin-at some time during every summer, and ROCK ISLAND STEAM LAUNDRYthese excursions are looked forward to with great anticipations. The president is bringing his sons up to enjoy "roughing it" as well as he does himself, believing that this is productive of manliness and a good thing for both health and morals. The boys have to take things as they come and make no complaints when they go on one of these trips. Four years ago, when Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate for vice president on the ticket with Mr. McKinley, he made a great many campaign speeches and traveled widely over the United States. It is not considered in keeping with the dignity of that high office for a candidate for the presidency who is already an incumbent of the position to travel about the country making campaign addresses. For this reason Mr. Roosevelt's summer is to be a comparatively quiet one. He will avoid the strain and fatigue of a speechmaking tour, with its incidental functions and handshaking episodes. It is expected that the president and his family will remain at Oyster Bay until late in September, and political delegations will not, as a rule, go to his summer home.
